THE ACT...

Montana and Facundo will craft a delicious pasta dish while dazzling the judges with feats of strength, flexibility, and balance. Facundo, balancing atop a cylinder, will effortlessly toss pasta. Meanwhile, Montana will gracefully descend from aerial silks, suspended in a breathtaking split. With playful precision, Facundo will balance a cheese grater on his forehead before tossing it to Montana. She'll catch it and, still gliding down the silks, grate the cheese upside down onto a plate held by Facundo. For a charming finale, Montana and Facundo will share a first bite of spaghetti, playfully reenacting the iconic scene from "Lady and the Tramp."

ABOUT

- Montana Debor and Facundo Saravia are a married couple who first met one another while performing with the same performance group in Atlantic City. After spending so much time together, they soon fell in love and became more than just co-workers. The magic of performing is what brought them together — and it continues to strengthen their bond as they find new ways to bring their unique blended performance to audiences across the country.
- Montana is a classically-trained violinist who got into the stage arts because of music. She started to cook for herself out of necessity at home, as no one in her family was a great chef. A DC native, she has been mostly inspired by her travels around the world. From Tokyo and Paris to Mania and Hong Kong, her violin and her acrobat skills have shown her all sorts of amazing cultures and cuisines. She even learned how to make Escargot in Paris.
- Facundo is a seventh-generation performer who comes from a long line of talented family members. His parents were both stage performers and he would often travel with them to their shows. He recalls learning how to cook while traveling for work, since many of the performers cooked for themselves in between shows or acts. Facundo comes from Argentinian roots, so he loves to craft a variety of dishes inspired by his heritage.
